The challenges

As the leading digital transformation consulting firm serving Global 2000 and other large enterprise customers throughout North America, Perficient sends hundreds of its employees far and wide each week to help customers in industries from automotive to healthcare. With unparalleled information technology, management consulting, and creative capabilities, Perficient's team members often solve issues using solutions from marquee partners that include some of the world's top software providers.

The Perficient corporate travel department actively seeks to make its employees' time on the road as easy and productive as possible. When the company sought an official rideshare partner, it immediately thought of Uber.

"It was a no-brainer. In my mind, Uber is synonymous with ridesharing, and it was our top choice from the get-go," says Mattie Yallaly, Perficient's Corporate Travel and Expense Manager. "As far as the cost, it ranks far behind other ground transportation options like rental cars."

"I would recommend Uber for Business 100%. I totally encourage other companies to try it. The integration with Concur saves a considerable amount of time spent on expense reports."

The solution

With Uber for Business, Yallaly and her team can set travel policies for employees and track usage metrics through its comprehensive dashboard. Employees access their work profile through the regular Uber app, easily toggling between their business and personal accounts. They can request rides in more than 60 countries around the world without worrying about language or currency barriers.

• Automate expense report entries with pre-populated ride receipts and expense code suggestions
• Match associated trips with corporate card transactions
• Seamlessly onboard new employees with one click
• Stay up to date on employees' employment status with SAP Concur's roster auto-sync

The results

Employee adoption of Uber for Business has been strong. "Given how much time some of our employees spend on the road, Uber provides significant time savings and much less frustration," says Yallaly. "This includes both while they are in transit and when they do their expense reports."

The feedback has also been positive. "Our employees appreciate that they can focus on work safely while taking a ride with Uber, rather than trying to navigate the hectic streets of an unfamiliar city in a rental car," explains Yallaly. "They also save time by skipping the rental car desk and getting to the client's office as quickly as possible."
